The old economy is failing.

A new economy is sprouting like shoots after a forest fire.

This transition to new ways of understanding and organizing work is as significant as the shift from hunting and gathering to agriculture 11,000 years ago and from agriculture to industry a few hundred years ago.

From Detroit, Michigan, where industrial jobs are gone forever, to points across the globe there are exciting and moving stories of invention and reinvention.

In October 2011 in Detroit, a groundbreaking conference will gather thinkers and doers from the worlds of activism, community organizing, labor, crafts, media, entrepreneurship, the arts, academe, and 'green'—in a 3-day collaborative discussion. You will come away inspired by people with whom you can collaborate in this profound economic and spiritual transformation.

Join Vandana Shiva, Grace Lee Boggs, Gar Alperovitz, your neighbors, family & friends in this urgent conversation and hear stories of work in our communities.

Discover how your neighbors are Re-inventing Work and Building Community.
